

Eligible Dividend Income

When investing, it's important to remember that there are different tax rates depending on the type of investment income received – including interest, dividends and capital gains – and they are not equal on an after-tax basis. This report provides an overview on the taxation of eligible dividends and, specifically, the after-tax impact of the dividend gross-up and tax credit mechanism that is unique to Canadian dividend income.

What are “eligible dividends”?

Dividends from Canadian corporations received by Canadian resident individuals are entitled to preferential tax treatment by both the Federal and provincial governments by way of a dividend gross-up and tax credit mechanism. However, the dividend tax regime for dividends paid by a Canadian corporation varies depending on the taxation of the income from which the dividends are paid. Specifically, an “eligible” dividend encompasses distributions to Canadian resident investors out of income subject to the general corporate income tax rate (i.e., generally, all dividends paid by public Canadian corporations). Given the relatively higher corporate tax rate on this income, higher dividend gross-up and dividend tax credit percentages are provided for eligible dividends received by a Canadian resident individual, which results in lower effective personal tax rates. On the other hand, dividends paid out of income subject to lower corporate tax, such as income qualifying for the “small business deduction” available to Canadian-controlled private corporations, receive lower dividend gross-up and dividend tax credit percentages and; as a result, these (latter) “ineligible” dividends are subject to higher effective personal tax rates. Currently, the “gross-up” on these “ineligible” dividends is 15% and the corresponding Federal dividend tax credit is 9.0301%.

Taxation of eligible dividends

As a result of prior decreases in the Federal general corporate income tax rate, parallel reductions to the gross-up and tax credit mechanism on eligible dividends were also implemented which increased the effective personal tax rate on eligible dividends. These changes were introduced because the dividend tax credit is intended to compensate individual taxpayers for the income tax paid by the corporation distributing the eligible dividend. The reduction in corporate tax, therefore, leads to a reduced dividend tax credit. In theory, lower corporate tax should lead to higher dividend payments (or higher share valuations), thereby offsetting the effect of the increased personal tax on eligible dividends.

For eligible dividends, the actual dividend received is grossed-up by 38%. So, if you receive a $100 eligible dividend, you will include $138 on your tax return and will receive a dividend tax credit (equal to 15.02% of the grossed-up amount for Federal tax purposes) that will reduce the actual income tax you pay on that dividend.

The 2022 Combined Federal and Provincial Top Marginal Tax Rates for Individuals table compares specific tax rates by province for each type of investment income.

2022 Combined Federal and Provincial Top Marginal Tax Rates for Individuals*
Province	Interest & Ordinary Income	Capital Gains	Canadian Dividends
			Eligible	Non-Eligible
Alberta	48.00%	24.00%	34.31%	42.31%
British Columbia	53.50%	26.75%	36.54%	48.89%
Manitoba	50.40%	25.20%	37.78%	46.67%
New Brunswick	53.30%	26.65%	33.51%	47.75%
Newfoundland and Labrador	54.80%	27.40%	46.20%	48.96%
Northwest Territories	47.05%	23.53%	28.33%	36.82%
Nova Scotia	54.00%	27.00%	41.58%	48.28%
Nunavut	44.50%	22.25%	33.08%	37.79%
Ontario	53.53%	26.76%	39.34%	47.74%
Prince Edward Island	51.37%	25.69%	34.22%	47.05%
Quebec	53.31%	26.65%	40.11%	48.70%
Saskatchewan	47.50%	23.75%	29.64%	42.29%
Yukon	48.00%	24.00%	28.93%	44.04%

* This table shows the 2022 top combined marginal tax rates by province. The rates apply to taxable incomes over $221,708, with the following exceptions: $227,091 in British Columbia, $322,171 in Alberta, $500,000 in Yukon and $1,000,000 in Newfoundland & Labrador.

As outlined in this table, the top tax rate for eligible dividends varies significantly, depending on the province in which you reside. For individuals in the top marginal bracket, eligible dividends incur a higher tax rate than capital gains in all provinces and territories, and the tax rate differential between eligible dividends and capital gains can be significant.

Other considerations

One often overlooked implication to the taxation of dividends is the impact that the gross-up of eligible dividend income can have on taxable income; particularly for individuals who receive income-tested benefits or credits. Although the dividend and gross-up tax mechanism can result in very low effective tax rates for individuals in the lower marginal tax brackets, the impact on the calculation of their taxable income resulting from the dividend gross-up can negatively affect income-tested benefits and tax credits, such as Old Age Security ("OAS"), Guaranteed Income Supplements ("GIS"), age and medical tax credits, in addition to other provincial benefits. However, the reduction in these benefits may be negated by the tax-efficiency of eligible dividend income. For affected individuals, an understanding of any potential impact on income-tested benefits would be required for a full analysis of the tax-efficiency of the various sources of investment income.

"Tax-free" dividend amounts

As previously discussed, the dividend tax credit can provide very low effective tax rates for individuals in the lower marginal tax brackets. In fact, individuals with no other sources of income can often receive significant amounts of dividend income without incurring any income tax because of the "power" of the dividend tax credit. The Maximum Dividend Income Before Incurring Income Tax table provides the maximum actual amount of Canadian eligible dividends that can be received by an individual resident in Canada, without triggering Federal or provincial/territorial income tax for 2022, assuming that the individual has no other sources of income. Note that the schedule does not apply to dividends received from a foreign source, and is only relevant for Canadian resident individuals (i.e., not applicable for trusts, corporations and non-resident individuals). Also, be aware that dividend income may be subject to the general income attribution rules or the expanded "tax on split income" ("TOSI") rules (i.e., for dividends paid by a private corporation), which may defeat income-splitting objectives.

“Tax-Free” dividend summary

Maximum Dividend Income Before Incurring Income Tax for 2022
	Eligible Dividends ¹
Jurisdiction	Actual	Taxable
Federal	$54,398	$75,069
Alberta	$54,398	$75,069
British Columbia	$54,398	$75,069
Manitoba	$26,958	$37,201
New Brunswick	$54,398	$75,069
Newfoundland and Labrador	$25,751	$35,536
Northwest Territories	$54,398	$75,069
Nova Scotia	$32,406	$44,720
Nunavut	$54,398	$75,069
Ontario	$54,398	$75,069
Prince Edward Island	$49,520	$68,338
Quebec	$41,350	$57,063
Saskatchewan	$54,398	$75,069
Yukon	$54,398	$75,069

Seek advice

Take time to review the types of investment income your investment portfolio earns to better understand and consider the potential impact of taxation to your portfolio. With an understanding of your investment objectives, your BMO financial professional will review your current portfolio with a view towards maximizing its after-tax return. After all, at the end of the year it's important to understand how taxes impact the after-tax return of your portfolio.

For more information, please speak with your BMO financial professional.

¹ For illustrative purposes only based on 2022 tax rates. Consultation with a tax professional is necessary to confirm the actual tax implications in each particular situation. This analysis assumes that the only tax credits available to the individual are the basic personal credit and dividend tax credit. It also assumes that the individual is single or, if married, the spouse's income is too high for any tax reduction from married status. This schedule does not apply to dividends received from a foreign source, and is only relevant for Canadian resident individuals (i.e., not applicable for trusts, corporations and non-resident individuals). Be aware that dividend income may be subject to the general income attribution rules or tax on split income (“TOSI”) rules (i.e., for dividends paid by a private corporation), which may defeat income-splitting objectives. Provincial health and other personal tax levies are not reflected.

BMO Private Wealth provides this publication for informational purposes only and it is not and should not be construed as professional advice to any individual. The information contained in this publication is based on material believed to be reliable at the time of publication, but BMO Private Wealth cannot guarantee the information is accurate or complete. Individuals should contact their BMO representative for professional advice regarding their personal circumstances and/or financial position. The comments included in this publication are not intended to be a definitive analysis of tax applicability or trust and estates law. The comments are general in nature and professional advice regarding an individual's particular tax position should be obtained in respect of any person's specific circumstances. While the information contained within is considered to be true and correct at the date of publication, changes after the time of publication may impact the accuracy of the information contained herein.

BMO Private Wealth is a brand name for a business group consisting of Bank of Montreal and certain of its affiliates in providing private wealth management products and services. Not all products and services are offered by all legal entities within BMO Private Wealth. Banking services are offered through Bank of Montreal. Investment management, wealth planning, tax planning, philanthropy planning services are offered through BMO Nesbitt Burns Inc. and BMO Private Investment Counsel Inc. If you are already a client of BMO Nesbitt Burns Inc., please contact your Investment Advisor for more information. Estate, trust, and custodial services are offered through BMO Trust Company. BMO Private Wealth legal entities do not offer tax advice. BMO Trust Company and BMO Bank of Montreal are Members of CDIC.

© Registered trademark of Bank of Montreal, used under license.

All rights are reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced in any form, or referred to in any other publication, without the express written permission of BMO Private Wealth.