Investing & the Art of Patience

Over recent months, the world has been caught off guard by the spread of the coronavirus. As we continue to grapple with the potential implications and uncertainties, this is a good reminder of the possibility of “black swan” events — unpredictable occurrences that can have major consequences.

We can’t always predict how the markets will respond to these surprise events. As we are witnessing, this particular global pandemic is expected to cause significant effects on economies and financial markets in the near term. However, it may be worthwhile to remember that past reactions to global pandemics have often been temporary in nature. While perhaps not seemingly as significant as Covid-19, with the Ebola outbreak in 2014 and SARS epidemic of 2003, the S&P 500 declined by double-digit percentages over their course. Yet, in the 12 months following both events, markets regained their losses and posted additional gains.[1]

Surprise events may also occur more frequently than we remember. A look back over 30 years shows just how common negative events have been (chart below). Yet, despite their frequency and the potential for short-term volatility, the S&P/TSX Composite Index still gained over 800 percent during this time.[2]

As individual investors, we have little control over the markets’ reaction to unpredictable events. During these times, the prevailing view can be one of worry and we may feel the urge to take action. Yet, for many longer-term investors, patience can often be most rewarded.

Even in the most difficult of times, we have persevered and progressed. This, too, shall pass. As difficult as it may be, try not to get too consumed by the worries generated in the news and remember that patience can be one of an investor’s greatest allies.

To Our Clients:

Recent market volatility has been unsettling for many. While short-term economic impacts from the coronavirus containment efforts are inevitable, we should not forget that the situation is expected to eventually be resolved.

During these uncertain times, I continue to monitor the rapidly changing developments. If you have questions or concerns, please call. If friends or relatives could use some reassurance during these times, I would be happy to offer my perspectives.

Have You Considered Your RRIF Withdrawal Strategy?

Over the years, many of us contribute to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan (RRSP) to achieve tax deductions and tax-deferred growth to plan for retirement. When the RRSP must be collapsed, funds are often converted to a Registered Retirement Income Fund (RRIF), which requires minimum withdrawals prescribed by the government based on age.[1] RRIF withdrawals are treated as taxable income.

If you plan on holding a RRIF, some forethought should go into your withdrawal strategy. Why? In some cases, withdrawing more than the minimum amount, either regularly or intermittently, can improve an overall lifetime tax bill. On the other hand, funds kept in the RRIF for as long as possible can benefit from tax-sheltered growth.

Here are some considerations, depending on your particular situation:

1. Use a younger spouse's age as a basis for withdrawals. If your goal is to continue growing tax-sheltered funds and you have a younger spouse, consider using the younger spouse's age to determine the minimum withdrawal for your own RRIF. This may be a way to preserve income-tested benefits such as Old Age Security. Keep in mind that you will need to notify us (or the financial institution where the RRIF is held) to make the change before the first RRIF withdrawal. Changes cannot be made once the spouse's age has been used.

2. Accelerate withdrawals to optimize your lifetime tax bill. If your RRIF minimum withdrawal amount and other income put you in a lower tax bracket today than in the future, it may make sense to withdraw more than the RRIF minimum to minimize your overall lifetime tax bill. In the absence of a spouse (which would permit a tax-free rollover of the RRIF), if significant RRIF funds remain at death (depending on the estate value), the estate may be subject to the highest marginal tax rate. Keep in mind that a withholding tax will apply to withdrawals in excess of the required minimum amount.

3. Use RRIF income to split income and for tax credits. If you have a spouse who is in a lower tax bracket, RRIF income may be used for income-splitting purposes. Transferring a portion of the RRSP to a RRIF can occur as soon as the year in which you turn 65 to take advantage of pension-income splitting and the pension tax credit.

4. Use withdrawals to fund a TFSA. If you have excess funds not immediately needed from RRIF withdrawals, consider contributing them to your TFSA.[2] This may be a great way to continue benefitting from tax-preferred growth: future growth in the TFSA will be tax free.

RRIF withdrawal considerations should be part of a larger retirement withdrawal strategy. Every situation is different, so call for assistance.

Saving Tax is a Year-Round Exercise

For many of us, this is the time when taxes are top of mind as we look to file our personal income tax returns for the previous year. Did you take action last year to reduce your tax bill in 2019? If the answer is no, perhaps you can do better this year. Here are four ways to help minimize your payables to the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA).

"Reduce" Your Refund — If you receive a tax refund from the CRA on a regular basis, this shouldn't be a cause for celebration. You're effectively providing an interest-free loan to the government. If you have an employer, consider updating Form TD1, which is used to calculate how much tax to deduct from your pay cheque. You may also file CRA Form T1213 if you know you'll have significant deductions in a given year to reduce the tax taken from your pay.

Maximize Your RRSP & TFSA — For RRSPs, consider setting up a monthly contribution plan: if you provide your employer with confirmation of the deductibility of these contributions, it may reduce the amount of tax withheld at source. Don't underestimate the value of tax-free compounded growth through a Tax-Free Savings Account (TFSA) — ensure you have maximized your contribution (see page 3).

Split Income with Your Spouse — If your spouse/common-law partner is in a lower tax bracket than you, consider income-splitting opportunities. Contribute to a spousal RRSP. There may be an opportunity to split investment income through a prescribed rate loan strategy with your spouse/partner. Seniors may consider splitting Canada Pension Plan benefits or eligible pension income.

2019 Tax Filing Reminders

Sold a home? If you sold property in 2019, and in order to claim the Principal Residence Exemption (PRE), it must be reported on an income tax return. The CRA continues to crack down on tax compliance for real estate transactions.

Held foreign assets? If you held "specified foreign property" (SFP) with a total cost in excess of CA$100,000 (outside of a TFSA, RRSP or RRIF) at any time in 2019, you are required to file Form T1135. For a full list of assets considered to be SFP, see the CRA website.

Optimize Asset Location — Different types of income (i.e., interest, dividends, capital gains) can be taxed differently depending on the type of account (i.e., registered, non-registered) from which income is generated. For instance, if foreign investments that pay dividends are held in a non-registered account, you may receive a foreign tax credit for the amount of foreign taxes withheld. If the same asset is held in a TFSA, no foreign tax credit is available. By having a comprehensive view of your assets, there may be opportunities to optimize asset location across different accounts while maintaining a balanced allocation.

Of course, these ideas and others depend on your own personal circumstances. Please seek the advice of a professional tax specialist, or call if you have questions. Now is the time to take action to maximize your tax savings for 2020!

TFSA: Don't Delay!

Have you fully contributed to your TFSA? The latest statistics show that the average TFSA holder has a significant amount of unused contribution room — around 60 percent of available contribution room remains unused.[1] With cumulative eligible contribution room now at $69,500,[2] the TFSA has the potential to be a compelling component of your retirement nest egg.

How compelling? Consider an investor who maximized annual TFSA contributions since 2009. With no further contributions, in 30 years, the investor would have over $400,000 — at an assumed 5 percent rate of return per annum (see table). Most important: any income earned will not be subject to tax.

What Is Your TFSA Strategy?

Don't overlook the opportunity to grow investments on a tax-free basis within a TFSA. When the TFSA was first introduced, many individuals held cash or low-risk, interest-bearing investments inside the plan — possibly because it was introduced as a "savings account". However, this approach forgoes the opportunity for longer-term, compounded, tax-free growth over time, which can be significant. As such, longer-term investors may be better served by using their TFSA as part of their investment strategy.

Use the TFSA to Your Retirement Advantage

The flexibility of tax-free withdrawals — no limitations on timing or amounts to be withdrawn, and the ability to recontribute withdrawn amounts[3] — can make the TFSA a savvy retirement planning tool.

Here are some of the potential opportunities:

- Preserve income-tested benefits or tax credits;
- Reduce taxable income in retirement;
- Supplement income to allow for the deferral of CPP/QPP benefits, potentially maximizing their value;
- Permit continued investment growth (beyond the age of 71, the age in which the RRSP must be collapsed) on a tax-free basis.

TFSA: Don't Overlook the Opportunity!

Year	Annual Dollar Amount	Cumulative Amount
2009 to 2012	$5,000	$20,000
2013 & 2014	$5,500	$31,000
2015	$10,000	$41,000
2016 to 2018	$5,500	$57,500
2019 & 2020	$6,000	$69,500

Growth Potential*	Assuming full contribution to 2020; No further contributions	Assuming continued future annual contributions of $6,000
In 20 years	$253,880	$462,196
In 30 years	$413,545	$832,109
In 40 years	$673,620	$1,434,659

*At a 5% compounded annual rate of return since TFSA inception in 2009.

A Valuable Estate Planning Tool

The TFSA may play a valuable role in estate planning. Consider that the value of TFSA assets at the time of the holder's death can be transferred tax free to beneficiaries. In provinces other than Quebec, if the TFSA does not pass through the estate, no probate will be payable in provinces where applicable. Most important, if a surviving spouse is named as a successor holder,[4] the TFSA can continue to be operated by the spouse on a tax-free basis. Any income earned after the holder's death will continue to be sheltered from tax. For a review or update of your TFSA beneficiary designations, please call.

Maintaining Perspective: Looking Back, Looking Forward

From year to year, stock market returns can vary widely. Volatility will always play a common role in the markets. Yet, while nobody knows how the equity markets will perform in the short term, history has shown that it is reasonable to expect markets to continue their upward climb over the longer term.

A look at the S&P/TSX Composite Index over the past 70 years provides good perspective for maintaining an optimistic outlook. On average, annual returns have been positive most of the time — regardless of the previous year's performance.

Insurance Strategies for HNW Individuals

High-net-worth (HNW) investors can have more complex needs than the average investor. The focus is often not just on growing funds, but also on preserving and protecting wealth to pass to future generations. HNW investors may have maximized contributions to tax-preferred accounts like Registered Retirement Savings Plans (RRSPs) or Tax-Free Savings Accounts. As such, the opportunity to minimize the tax burden associated with non-registered accounts is important. This is where permanent insurance can play a role.

Permanent insurance offers the benefit of tax-preferred growth of the policy's cash value, as well as a tax-free death benefit paid to beneficiaries which can help minimize estate settlement costs such as probate fees (where applicable). It may also be a suitable alternative to low-risk, fixed-income investments. With participating whole insurance, the majority of assets held in a separate participating investment account (managed by the insurance company) are longer-term debt instruments.

Here are four tax-savvy insurance strategies used by high-net-worth investors:*

Cascading Life Insurance Strategy — This may be a tax-efficient way to transfer wealth across multiple generations. It involves investing in a permanent life insurance policy on the life of a child/grandchild and naming a grandchild/great-grandchild as the policy beneficiary. Upon your death, the policy's ownership would be transferred to the child/grandchild on a tax-free basis. When they pass away, the grandchild/great-grandchild would receive the death benefit on a tax-free basis.

Back-To-Back (Insured) Annuity — This involves the purchase of a prescribed annuity and an exempt life insurance policy with the death benefit equal to the amount of the annuity investment (to preserve estate capital). The annuity continues to make payments over your lifetime, but part of this payment is a return of principal so only the income portion is subject to tax annually. This can result in higher after-tax cash flow compared to low-risk, fixed-income investments held in a non-registered account.

Joint Last-To-Die Policy — This can help offset taxes or maximize an inheritance. A single premium insures the lives of two people and the benefit isn't paid until the last insured person's death. The proceeds can offset future tax liabilities, including those that an estate may not be able to cover. If HNW individuals don't need RRSP/RRIF income and expect to have a higher marginal tax-rate in retirement, one strategy may be to fund the policy by gradually depleting funds from an RRSP/RRIF.

Corporate-Funded Insurance — For business owners, the cost to fund policy premiums can be lower if paid by the corporation if the business' tax rate is lower than the personal tax rate. An exempt permanent life insurance policy held until disposition within a corporation can allow for tax-deferred growth of the cash value of investments. As well, all (or a significant portion) of the death benefit can be distributed tax free to shareholder(s) through the capital dividend account.

There are many compelling strategies available to HNW investors. Please call for a discussion.

* With all of these strategies, there are also potential risks.
